However, this is generally left to the Trial Court Judges' discretion and is based upon the facts of your case and the type of case it is. Donal Logue.

While this list of factors is illustrative, none of these factors, standing alone, should be a determining factor. If you are by yourself and the mother has a lawyer making all of these statements that are against you, the judge is going to believe her every time. We should constantly challenge status quo and embrace changes.

I dislike the verbose and intricate style of the English statutes, and in our courts it occurs to me that ... we each will feel as though we are caged with a rattlesnake: There is going to be mutual fear, mistrust, dislike, and a contest for dominance. Your attitude will go a long way in determining your success, your recognition, your reputation and your enjoyment in being a lawyer.
